

WEEK 3

Print Edition

Special Points Decoder

Stomach & Spleen Channels

ST (45 pts) + SP (21 pts) = 66 Points

This Document Contains:

- Every special-point CATEGORY explained in plain terms
- Five-Shu (Jing-Well through He-Sea) with yin/yang elements
- Yuan-Source, Luo, Xi-Cleft, Confluent, Command, Lower He-Sea
- Back-Shu, Front-Mu, Hui-Meeting, Crossing points
- Worked ST & SP examples for every category

QUIZ 3 (next class) covers: ST & SP channels

HT & SI will be TAUGHT next week (Week 4).

MOA: ST pp.125-176 | SP pp.177-207 | CAM: Col. Fig. 3-5

Special Points Decoder – What Each Category Actually Means

ST & SP examples

Know the CATEGORY, not just the point. Every point below is defined by what its category does in the body.
The Five-Shu elements differ on yin vs yang channels – both are noted where they apply.

Jing-Well Wood	Where channel Qi begins to bubble up; most distal point (fingertip/toe-tip). Used for acute conditions, mental restlessness, and reviving consciousness.	ST45 Lidui SP1 Yinbai
Ying-Spring Fire (yin) / Water (yang)	Qi glides like a shallow spring; just distal to the MTP/MCP joint. Clears heat from the channel and its organ.	ST44 Neiguan (Yangming heat) SP2 Dadu
Shu-Stream Earth (yin) / Wood (yang)	Qi pours down a stream; on yin channels this point doubles as the Yuan-Source. Treats heaviness, joint pain, and intermittent chronic disease.	ST43 Zhiyin SP3 Taibai (= Yuan-Source)
Jing-River Metal (yin) / Fire (yang)	Qi flows abundantly like a river, near the wrist/ankle. Treats cough, asthma, chills-and-fever, and disorders of voice.	ST41 Jiexi SP5 Shangqiu
He-Sea Water (yin) / Earth (yang)	Qi collects and enters deep toward the organ, like a river reaching the sea; at the elbow/knee. Best for the Fu organ itself and for rebellious Qi (diarrhea, vomiting).	ST36 Zusanli SP9 Yinlingquan
Yuan-Source	The point where the organ's primary (source) Qi surfaces. Tonifies and regulates the organ directly; pairs with Luo of the coupled channel (Host-Guest technique).	ST40 Chongyang SP3 Taibai
Luo-Connecting	The junction that links a channel to its interior-exterior partner. Treats disorders of BOTH channels affecting (also #1 phlegm pt) SP4 Gongsun	ST40 Chongyang
Xi-Cleft	A deep cleft where Qi and Blood pool. THE point for acute, painful, and sudden flare-ups; yin channels (left points also treat bleeding).	ST40 Chongyang (acute stomach) SP8 Diji (acute dysmenorrhea)
Confluent	Opens one of the Eight Extraordinary Vessels. Paired across two channels to command that vessel (the Host-Guest pairing of the extraordinary system).	SP4 (the Host-Guest the CHONG MAI (pairs with PC6)
Command (Four/Six)	A point that 'commands' a whole body region regardless of channel theory – memorize by region. ST36 commands the abdomen.	ST36 Zusanli
Lower He-Sea	The true He-Sea for the six Fu organs, all found on the LEG yang channels. Where you treat the Fu organ even when its own channel is on the arm.	ST37 Shangwan (Stomach) ST39 = Lower He-Sea of SI
Back-Shu	Points on the Bladder channel beside the spine that transport Qi to a specific organ. Diagnostic (Back-Shu) and tonifying for chronic organ patterns.	BL20 Pishu (Spleen)
Front-Mu	Points on the chest/abdomen where an organ's Qi gathers on the front of the body. Pairs with the Back-Shu (Shu-Mu technique); best for acute Fu-organ conditions.	BL20 Pishu (Spleen)
Hui-Meeting	Eight influential points, each governing one tissue or substance (Qi, Blood, sinew, vessel, bone, marrow, Zang, Fu). Not on the ST/SP channels but tested as a category.	BL20 Pishu (Spleen)
Crossing (Meeting)	Where two or more channels intersect; one needle treats every channel that crosses there. ST leads all channels (mostly face) SP has 6 with 11 crossing points.	ST40 Chongyang